Detailed statistics:

- “ You can upload your own publications to your research profiles, then track the evolution of your readership.
 - “ How often are your papers downloaded?
 - “ How often are they read? From which academic disciplines and geographic regions do your readers come from?
- “ Additionally, there are detailed statistics for each academic discipline and research topic.
 - “ Who are the up-and-coming authors in your discipline?
 - “ Is the interest in a research topic growing or declining?
 - “ What are the most widely read papers on a specific subject?

- “ A research network that allows you to keep track of your colleagues' publications, conference participations, awards etc., and helps you discover people with research interests similar to yours
- “ Coming soon:
 - A recommendation engine for papers that might interest you, but are not yet in your library! Based on what you know already, what should you read next?
